

AUTHORS

Ekaterina Bemler is a postgraduate student in sociology at HSE University (Saint Petersburg, Russia). She is working on a candidate of sciences dissertation titled “Corporality in Women’s Narratives about Growing Up and Aging.” Her master’s thesis was on feminist online activism. Currently Bemler is a research intern at the Centre for Youth Research at HSE University and teaches in the HSE’s Department of Sociology. She is part of two collective projects: “Generation Z in Search of Balance: Working Conditions, Work Modes, and Life Values in the Views of Young People and Employers” and “The Creative Potential of Independent Proactive Action of the Russian Population: An In-Depth Analysis of Key Cases.”

Aleksei Boiko holds a master’s degree in sociology from the University of Manchester and is currently a PhD student in the Department of History at HSU University in Saint Petersburg (Russia). He is also a researcher at the Khamovniki Foundation for Social Research (Russia). In 2022–2023 Boiko had a visiting research fellowship in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Ben-Gurion University. His current research interests include frame analysis, mixed methods research, political anthropology, social movements, social network analysis, and the sociology of law.

Natalia Gramatchikova received her PhD from Ural State University (now Ural Federal University; UrFU) in 2004. For more than 20 years she was an associate professor in the Faculty of Philology of UrFU and also taught Russian as a foreign language. Since 2019 she is a senior researcher at the Center for the History of Literature at the Institute of History and Archaeology (the Ural Branch of the Russian Academy of Sciences, Yekaterinburg). Her research interests include regional literature and folklore, anthropology, nonfiction, ego documents, memoirs, and (auto)biographies. Gramatchikova is the author of six collective monographs, including The First Builders of Uralmash as a Performative Project: The Construction of Factory Identity (2023; in Russian, with Lidiia Enina), and more than 50 academic articles.

Vitaly Lekhtsier defended his doctoral dissertation in philosophy at Samara State University in 2008. Currently he is as a professor at the S. P. Korolev Samara National Research University. His research interests are sociology and anthropology of medicine, sociology and philosophy of literature, and phenomenology. He is a member of the Council of the Association of Medical Anthropologists of Russia (Institute of Ethnology and Anthropology of the Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow). He is the author of several books, including Illness: Experience, Narrative, Hope: Essay on Social and Humanistic Studies of Medicine (Vilnius, 2018; in Russian), Poetry and Its Other: Philosophical and Literary-Critical Texts (Yekaterinburg; Moscow, 2020; in Russian), and Between Choice and Care: Essays on Social and Humanistic Studies of Patient and Physician Experience (Samara, 2022; coauthored with Anna Gotlib, Irina Finkelstein, and Iuliia Shekunova; in Russian). He has also authored many scientific articles on the problems of social studies of medicine and phenomenology.

Sergey Startsev is a PhD student in the Department of Analysis of Social Institutions at HSE University (Moscow, Russia). He is currently part of the research group “Experience of Local Conflicts: Processing, Resocialization, Disability,” which studies participants of the armed conflict in Ukraine, specifically peculiarities of the reception of their combat experience, disability, and masculinity.

Yulia Zevako received her doctoral degree in political science from Saratov State University in 2012. She is currently a researcher at the Laboratory for Interdisciplinary Research in Humanities at the Institute of History and Archeology of the Ural Branch of the Russian Academy of Sciences (Yekaterinburg), as well as an associate professor in the Department of Russian History at the Ural Federal University. Her current research examines the mechanisms and practices of memory of the “difficult past” in Russia among the descendants of the third, fourth, and following generations from (non)participants in the events.